HANUKKAH: The Holiday of Rededication

By Ron Meyers

Hanukkah is a slightly misnamed holiday. “Hanukkah” means a dedication, while the event that the holiday commemorates was in fact the rededication of the Temple after it was occupied and desecrated by the Syrian powers. In rededicating something that holds special meaning to us and starting anew, the Maccabees took an action, perhaps the first in Jewish history, that has become a vital part of Jewish experience.

We have many observances, of course, that celebrate the initiation of things—Pesah, Shavuot, brit milah, namings, and weddings. But the reversal from danger to security, from defeat to restoration, is a powerful theme in the long and persistent culture of Judaism. The al-HaNisim prayer that we recite on Hanukkah (and also on Purim) acknowledges the miracles that have shifted our fate on so many threatening occasions.

It is interesting to note that we have no observance for the establishment of the Temple. The rededication of the Temple, perhaps, reflects a more essential truth about Judaism—that it is incumbent on us to continually rededicate ourselves to the tradition, to defend it against threat, and, all too frequently, to reestablish our communities and practices after a destruction.

At Shavuot, we do not speak of the Receiving of the Torah, but of the Giving of the Torah. We are, in every generation, responsible for receiving it again and making a place for it in the world, as the Maccabees did 2,200 years ago.

Hanukkah begins the evening of December 19th, each night adding a new candle and lighting the candle furthest to the left first.

CHAIM DOVID IN CONCERT AT OZ

We are pleased to present a special evening of music at Or Zarua. Chaim Dovid Sarachik will join us on Tuesday, November 11th, at 7:30 pm. For almost 25 years, Chaim Dovid has been touching Jewish souls with his inspiring and uplifting music. He is known as one of the most innovative and original songwriters of his generation. Magically, he weaves traditional Jewish themes into modern melodic passages. Besides his original songs of hope and love, Chaim Dovid is one of the freshest interpreters of the music of Shlomo Carlebach, his mentor and rabbi.

OZ members are welcome to discounted tickets at $10 each and will be guaranteed seats until October 18th. Please send a check for the desired number of tickets to the OZ office. The tickets will be waiting for you at the entrance.

In the words of Chaim Dovid, “Today’s reality is that our lives and our souls are in exile...the music sends a message from the heart of Jerusalem that redemption is real.”

From the Youth Department

By Ilana Burgess

On the first day of school, the sixth- and seventh-floor hallways came to life with the sound of children's voices. The students were happy to welcome back the veteran teachers and were a bit hesitant with the new ones. The students started with an assembly to learn the rules of synagogue behavior and meet their classmates and teachers. By the second day, everyone was very comfortable. Now, all grades are concentrating on the historical, cultural, and religious background of the holidays.

Let me tell you about the new teachers who have joined the Hebrew School staff:

Carmit Preis teaches fourth grade.

After serving in the Israeli army and graduating from Tel Aviv University, she taught Judaism and Hebrew at New England Hebrew Academy. Carmit's students are always busy learning new material about the holidays, Israel, and Tanach stories.

If you are on the sixth or seventh floors and you see a young man holding a guitar and acting like a troubadour, you have just encountered our music teacher, Rob Silverbush. He teaches our students to sing, pray, and chant some of the blessings. Rob will prepare the students to represent the school in a performance at the city Zimriyah (song festival). He will make us very proud.

Editor's Note

The OZ Newsletter welcomes articles submitted by Congregants. Articles should be no longer than 250 words and may be edited for length and clarity. They should be submitted by e-mail (as an attachment, as well as pasted into the text) to the office at admin@orzarua.org. If possible, digital images should be high resolution files at 300 dpi.

In order for our newsletter to maintain a bimonthly schedule, all articles must be received six weeks before the issue date. The deadline for the January/February issue is Wednesday, November 26th.

Many thanks for helping the newsletter to appear in a timely fashion.

DEATH, DYING AND THE AFTERLIFE

Join us for an evening devoted to this fascinating and important subject sponsored by the Hevra Kadisha of Congregation Or Zarua. As we are inevitably confronted with critically ill or dying family members or friends, often we are too ill-informed to be of the utmost assistance to our loved ones and to each other. And many of us wonder about the Jewish perspective on death. Our panelists include Congregants Robin Blumenthal, Assistant Director of Social Work; Dr. Sam Klagsbrun, noted psychiatrist, teacher, and author; Rabbi Steve Shulman, chaplain at Memorial Sloan-Kettering; and Rabbi Harlan Wechsler. The panel discussion will take place at Or Zarua on December 9, 2003 at 7:30 p.m.

OR ZARUA'S CARING COMMUNITY

Or Zarua would like to reach out to its congregants. If there is an illness in your family, please call Lidiya at 212-452-2310 x10 so we can be in touch with you and provide refuah shlemah wishes in person.

Contact Lidiya to share your family's good news—births and marriages, for example—so we can celebrate them with you as well.

Finally, please keep the office up to date on your address and phone numbers so we can contact you and keep our records current.

Jewish Renaissance and Anti-Semitism in Europe: Contradictions?

Shabbat Lunch, November 1st

Barbara Spectre, the guest speaker at Shabbat Lunch immediately following services on November 1st, is the Founding Director of Paideia, the European Institute of Jewish Studies in Sweden. The Institute, established with a grant from the Swedish Government, combines the study of Jewish texts with the arts. In just two years, Paideia has established a program that attracts students from all over Europe, a program for directors and curators of Jewish Museums in Europe, and A Month of the Arts, a series of programs and performances featuring texts and the arts in dialogue.

Ms. Spectre was Academic Coordinator at the Melton Center at Hebrew University for ten years and Head of Teacher Training in Zurich. A frequent lecturer and Scholar-in-Residence, she was appointed by Gershon Cohen as the founding Chairman of the Schechter Institute and served in that position for seven years. Her publications include A Theology of Doubt (in Hebrew). She now lives in Stockholm, where her husband, Philip Spectre, is the Rabbi. She and her family made aliyah in 1967.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE

PRESIDENT'S ANNUAL APPEAL

The following is an abridged version of the Kol Nidre Appeal address delivered by Daniel Beller on October 5, 2003. Members who have not yet contributed to the Kol Nidre Appeal should send in their pledge cards or communicate their pledges to the office by email (lidiya@orzarua.org) or by phone (212-452-2310 x10).

This is the time of year when we are obliged to reconsider and renew our relationships with man and God. And while not on the same plane religiously, I want to ask you, as I did last year, to reconsider and renew your relationship with your synagogue.

You make my task at this time an easy one, because this is a Congregation whose members are committed to their synagogue. Nevertheless, I learned the lesson many years ago that it can be a dangerous thing for a President of a Congregation to forego the Kol Nidre appeal.

When I was a boy, as the President of our Congregation rose to make an Appeal before Kol Nidre, my father, who was a generous contributor, also rose and asked the President not to continue. My father said that it was not fitting and he suggested that the members would give more generously if they could continue the holy service without interruption.

To my astonishment, and I'm sure to my father's as well, the President agreed. He sat down. He did not make an Appeal. And the synagogue went out of business.

So if you will permit me, I hope not to make the same mistake.

I think you all know by now that we simply cannot function as a synagogue without your support on this night. Our membership dues account for only 40% of the revenues needed simply to cover operating costs. Without your support tonight, we, too, would be out of business.

Giving, and giving generously, to Or Zarua is not the same as contributing to other charitable causes. This is not someone's else's institution. It's ours. It belongs to us. There is no "them" here, there is no "they" here. More than any Congregation that I know, this is a Congregation of "we"—a participatory, equal-opportunity Congregation. When we support the synagogue we are giving to ourselves.

The synagogue is central to the sustenance of Jewish identity and community. Numerous studies have shown that to be true. The synagogue—this synagogue—makes a difference in people's lives. I know this to be true from my own experience and I have seen it in the lives of other members of the Congregation.

Our synagogue has become a home for our children and, through them, their parents. We all saw the scores of beautiful children, with their parents in tow, gathered on the bimah on Rosh Hashanah listening to the shofar. And we all saw the light in the faces of the parents and our members as these beautiful children experienced a moment that will remain in their memories forever, as the same memories remain with us from our childhoods. These children are our future and the best reason to support our Congregation, with our hearts and our pocketbooks.

So, if providing a service every morning for those in our community who must say kaddish is a value that you share; if making our Hebrew School the best educational institution for our children that it can be is a value that you share; if providing the highest level of experience of prayer and study in a participatory and egalitarian setting is a value that you share; if having a vehicle for members to do more acts of kindness for the ill and the needy and the weakest members of our community is a value that you share; then I think you will need no further encouragement from me to give and to give generously to the Annual Appeal.

I know that there are many demands made on all of us to give to many worthy causes—political campaigns, civil rights organizations, Jewish welfare organizations and numerous other charities. All of this is undoubtedly important. But there is a question of priorities. And I want to ask you tonight to elevate your giving to Or Zarua to a high priority—higher than it has been.

If the demands on the synagogue were the same as last year, perhaps a contribution at the same level as last year might be appropriate or acceptable. But the needs of the synagogue are not the same as last year. To note just two examples: For obvious reasons, our security costs are already high and are likely to increase as we make full use of our building. And, in the post-9/11 era, you can well imagine that our insurance costs are far greater than could have been anticipated.

So I feel obligated to tell you that same as last year just won't do it, it will not even allow us to keep pace. And you have told me and other members of the Board that we need to do better than just keep pace. You have asked for more in the way of better education for our children, perhaps even at a younger age than currently is served by our Hebrew School; more adult education; more programs for our youth, the children over 10 whom we have not really served that well; more attention to our children in college, with whom we must maintain a bond as a community; more service to the ill—a bikur cholim program that really works and that brings comfort to our members who may be in hospital or ill at home; more support of our brothers and sisters in Israel—we all know that we have much more to do on that score.

When the tally of our deeds is finally made, we do not want to look back and regret that we did not do what we could have done and should have done for others. And one way to avoid that regret is to act now, to support the synagogue in its efforts, to contribute—to ourselves and to all that we are trying to accomplish through the Congregation for ourselves and others.

In a moment the ushers will walk around to collect your pledge. You may make a pledge by folding down the tab on your ticket. But we need to do better than last year. So whichever tab you reach for, just move your hand over one place and give at the next higher level. I promise you that you will feel better if you do.

I wish you all a g'mar hatimah tovah, a healthy year for all of us and our friends and families, and a year of peace for Israel and the world.

CONSERVATIVE JUDAISM IN ISRAEL: A Visit to Kehilat Sinai in Tel Aviv

By Yitzchak Frank

I met Rabbi Roberto Arbib and Mr. Motti Levitt at Kehilat Sinai Synagogue, 88 Bugrachov Street, Tel Aviv. It was an early morning on a beautiful sunny day, so the meeting took place around a small table under a tree in the synagogue yard. This was not an unusual meeting place for Kehilat Sinai's rabbi and president, not only because of the balmy weather, but also because the synagogue has no formal meeting room or library and its small office serves many other functions.

The synagogue is a small, simple, one-story building in the center of Tel Aviv, not far from the beach, next to Dizengoff Center (a large mall). It stands in the midst of older residential buildings and new residential towers. People from the congregation painted its exterior a few years ago. One large hall serves as the sanctuary, library, and place of learning (Midrasha). The congregation is a mixed one, with many immigrants from English-speaking countries, new Russian immigrants, and some Israeli-born.

Although many Israelis are not involved in any religious experience, most synagogues there are Orthodox. "The people who come to the Conservative synagogue," says Rabbi Arbib, "are those who believe that there is more than one way to be Jewish." The uniqueness of Kehilat Sinai under Rabbi Arbib's leadership is its interest in all aspects of Judaism, including Jewish history, literature and art. The practice in religious services is strictly Conservative, with full traditional services conducted in Hebrew. The prayer books are also in Hebrew, Nusach Sepharad, with an English translation. There is always a service on Friday night and Saturday morning, a Bar Mitzvah almost every Shabbat, and a third meal (Seudah shlishit) on Shabbat once a month, between Minhah and Ma'ariv.

Kehilat Sinai was founded about 18 years ago. Rabbi Arbib has been leading it for the last 12 years. He and Mr. Levitt see a particular mission in making Kehilat Sinai popular among both Israeli-born people and Russian immigrants. A pride and joy for Rabbi Arbib and the congregation is "Midreshet Eyun," a place to look into issues, study and learn. The theme there is Jewish-inclusive, encompassing not only religious studies, but also study of the Hebrew language, of Jewish history and culture, and discussion of current issues in evolving Israeli society. The teachers include university professors, poets, and writers.

The synagogue faces many hurdles. First is the lack of awareness about Conservative Judaism among so many young Israelis. Other difficulties include the older, transient population of central Tel Aviv, lack of government support (given in Israel to Orthodox but not to Conservative synagogues), and the lack of a suitable home for the synagogue (a problem which Congregation Or Zarua understands so well!). They were promised ground in one of the "gentrified" areas of Tel Aviv—Neve Zedek, between Jaffa and Tel Aviv—where they may be able to build a synagogue and a center for Jewish studies. But this is still a dream.

Rabbi Arbib and Motti Levitt wish to strengthen the relationship between Kehilat Sinai and Or Zarua. They extend an invitation to our Congregants visiting Tel Aviv to attend services in the synagogue and have offered to help arrange Bar/Bat Mitzvahs. They will share information and ideas on their activities. I have conveyed these messages to our Board.

FIRST CANDLE OF HANUKKAH AT OR ZARUA

Come celebrate Shabbat and Hanukkah, the night of the first candle, on December 19th, and stay for a dinner with latkes immediately following Kabbalat Shabbat. A reservation form is provided on page 9.

HESED COMMITTEE

Two Programs to Celebrate Hanukkah

Join DOROT and Or Zarua for Hanukkah Package Delivery

For the first time, Or Zarua will welcome DOROT into our home to help bring the festive lights of Hanukkah into the homes of many of our Upper East Side elderly. Make a note now on your calendar to spend a couple of hours the morning of Sunday, December 14th with DOROT, the wonderful agency serving homebound elderly on the Upper West and Upper East Sides, as we host their annual Hanukkah holiday package delivery.

At 9:00 a.m., after morning services, Or Zarua will open its doors to volunteers from anywhere in the community. After a brief orientation, the volunteers will be sent to visit a senior with a package of goodies in hand. Participants of all ages are welcome—this is a wonderful family activity! DOROT will provide fun holiday craft activities during or after the visit. To join us on December 14th, contact Laurie Pauker at 212-222-9333 or laurie-pauker@nyc.rr.com or Aaron Shelden at 212-734-4004 or ashelden@aol.com. For more information on DOROT, visit their website at www.dorotusa.org.

Or Zarua's First Hanukkah Toy Drive

In New York City, if a child is removed from his or her home and requires a Jewish foster placement, the City's Administration for Children's Services will usually contact OHEL Children's Home and Family Services, which has a network of families ready to accept foster children. OHEL administers the only foster care program in North America entirely devoted to Jewish children. The program provides the security of a loving Jewish family for children whose parents are unable to care for them. OHEL offers many other programs for children and families in need.

They welcome donations of toys for children in their care, and Or Zarua is hosting a Hanukkah Toy Drive from December 1st through 15th to help. Please bring new, unwrapped gifts to the collection box in the social hall. OHEL seeks educational toys and tasteful books. Contact Susan Sussman at 212-879-6889 or smsussman@aol.com with any questions.

SHARING THE NEW YEAR WITH THE ELDERLY

Or Zarua volunteers enjoyed themselves at DOROT's recent Rosh Hashanah package delivery on September 21st. Phyllis and Gerry Solomon commented, "We didn't quite know what to expect, but when we got to our assigned senior's home, we had such a nice time talking and sharing stories of our families' holiday traditions. She seemed so pleased to have us visit, but we felt like we were the fortunate ones."

UPDATE FROM THE Or Zarua Aesthetics Committee

By Aaron Shelden

About a year-and-a-half before the new building construction was completed, the Or Zarua Board of Directors formed a committee with the mandate of overseeing design additions to the building after its completion while maintaining the original architectural and design ethos.

The first tasks of the aesthetics committee were the creation of the parochet (the ark curtain), the bimah table cover, and the reader cover for the Torah. The search for a Judaica artist led to the eventual selection of six artists. Adina Gatt, an Israeli artist who had created a number of Judaica fabrications in Israel and America, was chosen and the committee commissioned her to design and create the parochet, bimah table cover, and reader cover that now adorn the sanctuary.

The committee has also acquired the American and Israeli flags and flagpoles. It selected and monitored the affixing of mezuzot throughout the building. (The mezuzah affixed to the exterior structure of the building in a glass-enclosed case was the original mezuzah at the entrance of the former building.)

The new Kiddush cup purchased by the committee was originally created by the artist Ludwig Yehuda Wolpert, in a limited-numbered edition, for the commemoration of the 25th anniversary of the State of Israel.

The committee was responsible for the current mounting of framed art throughout the building, including art recently donated to the synagogue and exhibited in the social hall.

Note that the magnificent rimonim that now adorn one of the Torahs were purchased by the rabbi during his recent trip to Israel and donated by the Tannenbaum family to coincide with the first yahrzeit of Muriel Tannenbaum.

Future aesthetics committee projects now in planning or development include:

- (1) additional lighting, to be added to the sanctuary in two stages, to illuminate the interior of the ark and to modify two of the light cages on either side of the bimah to better illuminate the outside of the ark as well as the sanctuary;
- (2) a combination bulletin board/directory on the left wall in the main lobby to inform people about synagogue events and the location of spaces within the building;
- (3) signage at each floor lobby and in the elevators;
- (4) a donor wall on the second floor facing the elevators;
- (5) a design solution for the unevenness of the north and south walls of the sanctuary;
- (6) a bimah table tray to be used during Havdalah; and
- (7) an Elijah's chair (for britot in the sanctuary).

The current members of the aesthetics committee are Bobbi Collier, Alisa Doctoroff, Jacqueline Frank, Diana Goldin, Aaron Shelden (chairman), and Nancy Wolfson.

OR ZARUA BOOK DISCUSSION

Stay connected. Read a good Jewish book. On December 7th, come to Or Zarua for our discussion of Three Daughters by Letty Cottin Pogrebin. Share your reactions to this well-known writer's witty first novel about three sisters' relationship with Judaism, with each other, and with their father during the months leading to his 90th birthday celebration on New Year's Eve. (There are more fireworks in the family than in the sky that night.) Then stay for a nosh after the discussion.

Participation in this group is a wonderful way for Congregants to learn and get to know one other better in a casual setting. We read a mix of fiction and non-fiction with Jewish content. Scheduled meetings are held on Sunday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 pm in the Or Zarua library on the 4th floor. Congregants and their guests are welcome.

Please mark your calendar for the following gathering as well. On Sunday evening, January 25, 2004, we will discuss If a Place Can Make You Cry by Daniel Gordis. Rabbi Gordis made aliyah in 1998 with his family. This book draws on e-mails sent to his friends and family in the United States from 1998 to 2002, describing his reaction to their new life in Israel and to the worsening situation there.

If you have a book recommendation, want to be added to our list for e-mail notices, or have questions about our book discussions, contact Reed Schneider at 212-860-8611 or arlm1199@aol.com.
