OR ZARUA CELEBRATES 17 YEARS WITH Shabbat Kiddush Lunch and Lucy Dawidowicz Lecture

ll Congregants are invited to attend two special events in celebration of OZ's 17th birthday:

• A Shabbat Kiddush Lunch on January 28 following services will celebrate the 17th anniversary of Congregation Or Zarua's very first service, held at the 92nd Street Y in 1989. From the initial service through the High Holy Days in 1989, OZ held monthly services. Weekly Shabbat services were then begun, followed by the daily Shaharit minyan once the building was complete.

• The Lucy Dawidowicz Memorial Lecture on January 30 at 8:00 p.m.

will honor OZ's 17th birthday. Professor Jon D. Levenson will speak about "The Conversion of Abraham in Judaism, Christianity and Islam." Dessert and coffee will be served after the lecture.

Jon D. Levenson

Dr. Levenson has been described as "the most interesting and incisive biblical exegete among contemporary Jewish thinkers." His work involves reinterpre-tations of biblical text, the "rewritten Bible" of Second

Temple Judaism, and rabbinic midrash, often focusing on the relationship between Judaism and Christianity. Dr. Levenson is active in Jewish-Christian dialogue, and his influence travels well beyond the bounds of Judaism. His 1993 book, The Death and Resurrection of the Beloved Son: The Transformation of Child Sacrifice in Judaism and Christianity (1993) has stimulated intense discussion.

Dr. Levenson earned his bachelor's. master's, and doctoral degrees from Harvard. He began teaching there in 1988 and is currently the Alfred A. List Professor of Jewish Studies.

OVERNIGHT AT OZ'S SUKKAH

By Adrianna Sisley and Ortal Isaac

The overnight was a blast! We made friends, played games, and learned about how people keep Shabbat. During the meal in the sukkah, we were wondering how we would spend the night in sleeping bags, in the rain on the rooftop. As the night rolled in, more students decided to sleep in the sukkah and not in the library—they were excited about being able to fulfill the mitzvah of sleeping in a sukkah. We told scary stories, chatted, and had lots of fun.

Around midnight when the weather became worse, some kids decided that they'd had enough and headed downstairs to the library. The bravest of us stayed on the roof and finally fell asleep. It was cold and windy, but we felt like pioneers and we were not ready to give up our decision to spend the whole night in the sukkah—until we woke up to the sound of raindrops falling on us. We gave up and joined the rest of the students in the library.

In the morning, we had a great breakfast and then we participated in a very relaxed service. All of us went home tired but very happy because we spent a night in our synagogue, kept Shabbat, and spent wonderful time with friends.

We hope that we will be able to do this again next year.

New Books in the OZ Library

The OZ library is a welcoming place to spend some free time. Our wide selection of books includes histories, biographies, novels, encyclopedias, biblical commentaries, and more. Here are some recent acquisitions:

The Beginning of Desire: Reflections on Genesis by Avivah Gottlieb Zornberg

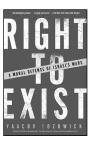

The Particulars of Rapture: Reflections on Exodus by Avivah Gottlieb Zornberg

Etz Hayim Study Companion Edited by Jacob Blumenthal and Janet L. Liss

Our Haven and Our Strength: The Book of Psalms by Martin Samuel Cohen

Right to Exist: A Moral Defense of Israel's Wars by Yaacov Lozowick

RABBI DAVID HOFFMAN, SCHOLAR-IN-RESIDENCE

January 6 and 7, 2006

Rabbi David
Hoffman will join us on January 6 and 7
as Scholar-in-Residence.
Rabbi Hoffman was the Rabbinics instructor
for the OZ Me'ah Class

last spring. His excitement about his subject matter inspired members of the class to share their enthusiasm with the entire Congregation by requesting that he be selected as Scholar-in-Residence. The theme for our Shabbat discussions will be "The Pursuit of Meaning: Text and Ideas."

Rabbi Hoffman is a Senior Rabbinic Fellow in the Department of Institutional Advancement at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, where he was ordained. His fields of expertise include rabbinic history, theology, and law. A doctoral candidate, he now serves as the Director of the Eisenfeld-Duker Beit Midrash and is an adjunct instructor in the Department of Talmud and Rabbinics at JTS as well as a faculty member in the Me'ah program.

Following Friday night services, which will begin at 4:27 p.m., our Shabbat Dinner will feature Rabbi Hoffman discussing "The Conflict between Judaism and Science in the Thought of Rabbi Joseph Dov Soloveitchik." Rabbi Joseph Soloveitchik, the leading Modern Orthodox scholar in North America for over half a century, was firmly rooted in his family's halakhic tradition. Yet he innovated a new perspective for Orthodox Judaism, synthesizing the tradition of Torah study with Western philosophical thought. Anyone, regardless of affiliation, can be inspired by Rabbi Hoffman's interpretation of Rabbi Soloveitchik's passionate and magisterial reading of traditional Jewish sources as they relate to today's intellectual freedom.

During Shabbat morning services, Rabbi Hoffman will teach "Philosophic and Talmudic Reflections on Vayigash." During Shabbat lunch, he will present a talk on "Spirituality, Jewish Law and What It Means to be a Conservative Jew in the 21st Century."

Reservations are required for Friday night dinner and Saturday lunch at a cost of $25 per adult for each meal. To reserve a seat for the meals, please mail a check to: Congregation Or Zarua, 127 East 82nd Street, New York, NY 10028 by January 3, 2006. For more information, please call the synagogue office at extension 10.

Shabbat Across Or Zarua...and America

Z will join the rest of the nation in celebrating Shabbat Across America on Friday, March 3, 2006. All are invited to a Shabbat dinner in the synagogue's social hall. This is the first year we will observe this event in our new building!

Shabbat Across America, developed in 1997 by the National Jewish Outreach Program, is designed to introduce Jewish people across the country to the joys of Shabbat observance. Most synagogues participate by hosting a communal Friday night dinner. When the program began, we were housed in the old Or Zarua building, which could not accommodate a large group for this kind of dinner. In order to be part of the tradition, we developed Shabbat Across Or Zarua with home hospitality.

We observed our own traditional Shabbat Across Or Zarua on November 18 to honor Parashat Vayera. In the parashah, Abraham welcomes strangers to his home, and Or Zarua members followed his example by welcoming other members to their homes. Again, the event was a resounding success! Nearly 50 members enjoyed the gracious hospitality of seven host families. Guests—from toddlers to seniors—shared Shabbat joy, delicious food, and stimulating conversation with other OZ members, new and old.

Thanks again to the hosts: Joanne and Marc Ashley, Susan and Ed Kopelowitz, Sharon and Alex Mack, Suzan and Daniel Rosen, Evelyn Kenvin and Arthur Rosenbloom, Diane Okrent and Aaron Shelden, and Nora and Barry Yood.

Shabbat Across Or Zarua was chaired by Diane Okrent, Anne Schneider, and Vicky Stein.

Volunteers and donors needed. Please contact Lesley Palmer at lesley@nyc.rr.com or 212-772-9673.

DAVID ARNOW

will return for a discussion on Creating Lively Passover Seders Thursday, March 16 at 7:30 p.m.

Tu B'Shevat: Save the Trees!

WHAT DOES "TU B'SHEVAT" MEAN?

"Tu" is the way we pronounce the Hebrew letters tet (9) and vav (6) to represent the number 15. This arithmetic combination of letters is used rather than the letters for 10 and 5 because the yud heh combination spells one of the names of God. So, Tu B'Shevat is the 15th day of the month of Shevat.

WHAT IS THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THIS DATE?

It marks the new year for trees—one of four new year's days identified in the Mishnah. (The others are the first days of Tishri, Nisan, and Elul.) This new year's day pertained to the agricultural practice of tithing, when one-tenth of a farmer's produce was donated to the Temple. The 15th of Shevat was considered the cutoff for calculating the annual fruit-tree yield because by that date, most of the year's rain in Israel would have fallen and the sap would have begun to flow inside the trees.

HOW HAS THE DAY BEEN CELEBRATED WITHOUT THE TEMPLE?

The Tu B'Shevat seder was created in 16th-century Tzfat. At these mystical gatherings, the menu included foods from the seven main crops mentioned in the Torah: grapes, barley, figs, dates, wheat, olives, and pomegranates. Haggadot for Tu B'Shevat seders held today may incorporate the theme of bal tashhit—the prohibition against wanton destruction pertaining to trees (Deuteronomy 20:19-20). Traditions vary for which fruits to eat. Some have a custom of eating one fruit with a peel, one with a pit, and one completely edible to represent the mystical levels of creation; some eat a new fruit to include the Sheheheyanu blessing in the ceremony. In keeping with the spirit of preserving natural resources, some communities here dedicate the day to an environmental conservation project. In Israel today, tree-planting is a typical Tu B'Shevat activity. But it is also easy for Jews in the Diaspora to plant trees in Israel through the Jewish National Fund website, www.jnf.org—just select "Click here to plant trees."

Or Zarua Book Discussions

lease join our book discussions in the OZ L library on Sunday evenings at 7:30 p.m.

On January 22, we will discuss the distinguished writer Joseph Roth's classic 1932 novel, The Radetzky March. Roth (1894-1939) traces the demise of the Trotta barony in tandem with that of Austro-Hungarian Emperor Franz-Joseph and his empire. A Trotta grandfather, father, and son serve their country according to a rigid code of honor and duty, even after "the paradise of simple faith" in a well-ordered European world is lost. Pat Davidson will lead the discussion.

On February 26, Jewish Week writer and Congregant Martha Mendelsohn will lead us in discussing Welcome to Heavenly Heights, a contemporary novel by Risa Miller. Miller describes the ups and downs of a year in the lives of several American women who have made aliyah to the same small > town outside Jerusalem. Miller paints an intimate cameo of the tensions within, and the hopes shared by, the families in this committed community. Are these families "heroes or just plain crazy," as one character muses?

THE KABBALISTIC MEANING OF Lekha Dodi:

LEARNING AT KABBALAT SHABBAT January 20 through March 31

as scholars, for those seeking spirituality as well as those steeped in traditional observance, Milgrom-Elcott and for Jews as well as ✓abbalah is very much in vogue—

for non-scholars as well

non-Jews (some of them quite famous!).

A favorite worship service has always been the beautiful Friday night collection of psalms and songs known as Kabbalat Shabbat—welcoming Shabbat. That service is a direct bequest of the Kabbalists of Tzfat, who prepared for the Shabbat Arvit service by going out to the fields of that beautiful city in Israel's north. Lekha Dodi is sung during the service to welcome Shabbat. It was written in the mid-16th century in Tzfat, a major center for the study of Kabbalah, by the poet and kabbalist Solomon Alkabetz.

What most people don't know, though, is that Lekha Dodi is a kabbalistic, mystical poem.

From January 20 through March 31, we will learn about the Kabbalistic imagery and theosophical import of Lekha Dodi at our Friday evening service, between Minhah and Kabbalat Shabbat. We will study the critical themes, images, and theurgic ramifications of Lekha Dodi.

Our teacher will be Yaron Milgrom-Elcott, a second-year doctoral student with a focus in medieval Kabbalah in the Department of Hebrew and Judaic Studies at New York University. Yaron majored in religion at Syracuse University. He also taught adult education at Kol Ami in White Plains and Temple Har Shalom in Park City, Utah. Yaron lives on the Upper East Side with his wife, Miriam, a medical student. He attends Kabbalat Shabbat at Or Zarua.

The Neighborhood Coalition for Shelter (NCS), one of our community partners on the Upper East Side, welcomes donations of used computers for its formerly homeless clients who are now in permanent housing. If you would like to donate an IBM-compatible PC with keyboard and monitor (and even better, a printer!), that is no more than five years old, contact Richard Stadin at 212-879-0448 or stadin1@aol.com. Or Zarua volunteers will help arrange delivery, delete your data, and install the computer for NCS clients. If you know about computers and would like to volunteer for any or all of these tasks, please also contact Richard. This project, in addition to being environmentally responsible, is a great community service opportunity for student volunteers.

The Beat Goes On

By Ron Meyers

Midwinter is a dormant period in the Jewish calendar. January and February come and go with no major observances. But in the regular rhythms of seasons and readings, the full range of Jewish experience remains fully on display.

In the second week of February, we will read about the Exodus from Egypt, in Parashat Beshalah. The day is named Shabbat Shirah, the Sabbath of Song, in honor of the songs that the Israelites sang in celebration after crossing through the parted sea. These songs are the first collective expression of the Jewish nation, and they follow the nation's first collective acts, those of the Passover feast and of marking the doorposts in preparation for the Exodus. The preparations show the people at their most obedient, adhering to the details of God's command; the songs show the people at their most exultant, connecting to God in all their spontaneity.

In the very same week that we read this most vivid account of God's action in history, we will observe Tu B'Shevat, the new year of the trees, which highlights God's action in nature. In this single week, we contemplate God's specific and direct relationship with the people of Israel and also God's universal presence in the order of the world.

As the sap begins to rise in the trees around Tu B'Shevat, all the great themes of Jewish observance run quietly through the dark days of winter.

American-Jewish Music Comes of Age

Sunday, February 12

On the day after Shabbat Shirah, Sunday, February 12, 2006, OZ will celebrate American-Jewish music. Renowned musicologist Robert Cohen will join us for a lecture on the topic "American-Jewish Music Comes of Age."

Come to minyan at 8:45 a.m., stay for breakfast, and at 10:00 a.m., enjoy listening to and learning about contemporary Jewish music. This program will appeal to adults and teens.

Jewish music always reflects its time and place—spiritually, culturally, and even sociologically. American-Jewish music in this generation, therefore, incorporates the eclectic vitality of American musical styles, resonates with the joy and spiritual searching characteristic of this era of Jewish renewal, and conveys our need for both intimacy and participation. We'll listen to contemporary American-Jewish music in an exhilarating range of styles and consider the key sources and influences—especially Hassidic music and American folk music—behind this musical renaissance.

Robert Cohen has produced and hosted over 100 radio programs on Jewish identity and culture, including "Yedid Nefesh" on WEVD and National Public Radio's "One People, Many Voices: American-Jewish Music Comes of Age." He has taught contemporary Jewish arts and American folk music at the New School for Social Research and has lectured on Jewish music at the New York Public Library, the Jewish Theological Seminary, the New England

Conservatory of Music, the American Jewish Historical Society, and the Cantors Assembly.

You'll be able to take this wonderful experience home with you—after the lecture, you will be able to purchase Robert Cohen's compilation CD, Open the Gates! New American-Jewish Music for Prayer.

If you plan to attend, please notify the synagogue office through the website or by calling extension 39.
